United States Immigrant Families

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The development of this book has been a work in progress for many years. Johannes Gelderloos (b.1909) began to collect the Gelderloos family data, and his son Hendrik (Henk) Gelderloos (b.1939) continued the project after his passing in 1990. Henk has graciously shared his data with me and many other family members who have contacted him for the information. I have always had an interest in genealogy, but the pressures of work and family prevented me from concentrating on the hobby. One of my retirement goals was to work more diligently on developing the family tree to an even greater extent. It has and continues to be a source of enjoyment.

Although the Dutch component of the family tree was quite complete, I have been able to research some of the records in the Netherlands, and made contact with some family members living in the Netherlands who helped me add some data to that branch of the tree. The United States branch of the family is where I could lend my greatest assistance to the completion of the tree. Many family members and those of the extended family contributed much of the data. A few individuals provided an extra amount of help.

First of all, my deepest appreciation goes to my wife Jan Gelderloos. She not only provided excellent proofreading expertise, but she also worked to improve the photographs that are included in the book. Many of them were of very marginal quality, and she improved them immensely.

Probably one of my greatest cheerleaders and coaches for this project has been my mother Kathryn Jeanette Barendsen Gelderloos (b.1909). As she was approaching her 100th birthday, I wanted to gather and record as much data from her stories as I could. Not only were we able to spend many hours of sharing family stories, but I could also greatly enhance the contents of the book. Her insights and phenomenal memory were beyond value to this project....Thanks Mom!!

A special thanks also is extended to my first cousin Karen Hoekstra for her contribution of some old photos and descriptions of the first farms that our ancestors had in the United States. A second cousin 1x removed William Buthker, also a genealogist, helped with some difficult issues.

I hope you will find the book informative and helpful in your journey to find your place in the Gelderloos Family Tree.

INTRODUCTION

My main goal in writing this collection of anthologies about the Gelderloos family is to lend a perspective on the evolution and circumstances that molded our family tree. The major emphasis will be on the more current (20th & 21st century) families of which I was able to gather more information. However, through the expertise of a fifth cousin, Hendrik (Henk) Gelderloos of Diepenveen, Netherlands, and the work of his father Johannes Gelderloos, I have accumulated much data from the family(s) in the Netherlands, dating back to the middle 15th century. The Dutch have always been known for their excellent record-keeping skills, and the records for our family are no exception.

Another goal of this book is to provide my children, grandchildren, and presumably future generations with more details of the Gelderloos Family. Most of the information was gathered either from actual documents that relate to the situation being presented, or from first hand stories related to either myself or other living relatives. Where a situation warrants conjecture, I will attempt to express that point.

The design of this book is intended to reflect on a number of topical situations that would be common for most generations. Many issues including marriage, housing, transportation, education, and occupations will be explored.

I also have, in another book, a genealogical outline of the family as I have been able to collect it. It contains records, that I received from Henk Gelderloos, of the oldest known “blood” line relative in the Gelderloos family, Derk Cornelis. He married a Hendertjn Hendrijcks on 14 January 1655 in Woltersum, Slochteren, Groningen, Netherlands, and died on 14 April 1698. Even though the Gelderloos surname did not become officially used until the early 1800’s, Henk and his father Johannes Gelderloos were able to document this lineage through church and civil records in the Netherlands.

According to my research about the name selection process in the Netherlands, everyone was legally mandated to take on a surname by French Emperor Napoleon in 1811. Between 1810 and 1814, parts of the Netherlands were annexed to France, and the French franc was declared the official tender. It is assumed that this name selection practice was undertaken to better account for all the Dutch citizens and also for the commercial purpose of tax collection. It was a common practice when selecting names that a family chose a name that reflected where they lived or in what occupation the family was employed. It is uncertain how the Gelderloos name actually came into existence, but it is widely accepted that the name means “Money Less”. The “Gelder” portion of the name presumably came from the Dutch currency guilder, and the “loos” portion of the name means “less, or without”...thus “money less”. The guilder was the Dutch currency of the Netherlands from the 17th century until 2002, when it was replaced by the euro. Some Dutch families chose just the name Gelder, while other families selected the name Loos. In fact, during one of their visits to the Netherlands, my parents saw a moving and storage company truck on the highway with a company name of “Gelder and Loos Moving and Storage”. Another variation to the name is a clan of families who selected the name Geldeloos, omitting the “r” as we have it in our family. These families are not related to the Gelderloos family. Families also selected names to distinguish themselves by the name that they took, ie. a shoe maker might chose the name Schoenmaker, and a carpenter might choose Timmerman – Timmer meaning wood worker. It is perhaps for this reason the name Gelderloos was chosen. Early Gelderloos family members were mostly farm helpers not considered to be wealthy or “upper-class” folks. They were also not considered to be “lower-class” citizens. So, the creation of the name Gelderloos seemed appropriate for their situation.

DATA SOURCES

I currently have a total of 447 persons with the surname of Gelderloos given to them at birth, 223 males, and 223 females. This is presumed to be accurate +/- 5% as of the end of 2009. There are 1,098 descendants of Derk Cornelis, (d.1698), the oldest known blood relative of the Gelderloos family. Through the combined efforts of many family members, both in the U.S. and in the Netherlands, we have been able to collect the names of all Gelderloos family members. In addition, much information about each of their families has been gathered. These data have been stored in a genealogy program called Family Tree Maker, published by Ancestry.com. The output of this program can be generated into a gedcom file which I will happily share with anyone within the family. I believe the true value in doing genealogy work is the sharing of the data to better preserve the historical records.

An interesting project associated with this data collection process involves the use of an Internet social networking vehicle called Facebook. In an effort to connect with as many of the Gelderloos family that I could, I opened a Facebook account. I invited all the Gelderlooses, who had Facebook accounts, to participate in our genealogy project. The response exceeded my expectations. Not only were many of them interested to help, but they also engaged many of their other family members in the data gathering.

EARLY GELDERLOOS FAMILY HISTORY

Much of the following information was provided by Hendrik (Henk) Gelderloos of Diepenveen, Netherlands.

Reconstructing the lives of our early family members is a difficult task.

Because they were not wealthy land barrens or famous business owners, records of “ordinary” citizens were usually not kept. Only when citizens possessed something, like a farm or a store, were records initiated. When an individual married or died, a record would have been generated, but many of them are not available anymore. Sometimes one can find records of individuals in a church where they attended. Such was the case of Derk Cornelis, the oldest direct-line ancestor of our family that has been documented. He was an elder in his church and therefore a record of his existence can be found. Likewise for his son Hendrik, who was a deacon in the same church in Woltersum, Netherlands.

During the 1700’s, as mentioned before, most of our ancestors were farm helpers (servants). They did not acknowledge wedding acts at that time in the same manner as we do today; their marriages were mostly church acknowledged and not a civil recorded act. “Legal” marriages as we know them today came after the Napoleonic Period. Once marriages took on the civil dimension, much more data can be harvested from those early records, ie. names of parents, birthdates, occupations, etc.

Around 1811, everyone in the Netherlands was obliged to take a name that became registered with the government. At this time, more records were initiated, and through research, Henk and his father were able to compile this historical data.

In 1832, the government started a land registry. This registry enables one to trace some property transactions. The first farm that was recorded to a Gelderloos is one that was owned by Cornelis Hendriks, my Great Great Grandfather and his first wife Grietje Jacobs (pictured). He bought this farm on 14 June 1777. His son Klaas Kornelis, from his second marriage to Jantje Klaassens van der Veen, inherited it from his father, and later Klaas passed it on to his son Hendrik Klaasens. He sold the farm on 14 December 1899 to the Jacob Doornbos family for f.17815. In 1832 this farm, located in Schildwolde on the street Denemarken, consisted of 22 hectares (54.4 acres). The farm site is the same as pictured, but the buildings have all been renovated.

The second farm was also in Schildwolde, at the Schildwolderkijk. There are no pictures of this farm; it burned down on 18 February 1936. It was owned by Pouwel Hendriks and Wijkje Jans Spoor. They bought it on 17 May 1799 for f.800. In 1832 that farm was 12 hectares (29.7 acres). On 10 November 1866 this farm was sold to Jacob Fokkes Janssens for f.3365. This man could not pay his debts, so the farm was again sold on 28 January 1875. Geert Gelderloos and his wife Fokkien Snijders bought the farm for f. 5200. Their daughter Wijkje later sold the farm to M. Pestman for f.7000. At that time there was only 6 hectares (14.8 acres) left. It is unknown what happened to the other 6 hectares.

The farm burned on the same day of the sale, so it is believed that the fire was no accident.

The third farm (pictured) was in Siddeburen, next to Schildwolde, Netherlands. It belonged to Derk Gelderloos and his wife Harmke Jans Rijzel. It was located at the Akkereindsweg 17, and in 1832 it consisted of 11 hectares (27.2 acres). It was sold on 18 August 1854 to Nanne Tymens Jager for f.3700. At this time Derk Gelderloos had a lot of debts. The record of his possessions on the day of the sale shows he had 86.5 cents in his house.

The fourth farm in Siddeburen, located at Westerzanden 4 in Hellum consisted of 5 hectares (12.4 acres). Pouwel Gelderloos and his wife Tammechien J Koerts bought this farm on 15 November 1866 for the price of f.2025. They sold the farm on 25 January 1884 to Jan Hertog for the price of f.4500. In 1988 that farm burned down, and there are now new buildings at that location.

The next recorded land ownership that I have record of in the direct line of my ancestors belonged to Jurjen (Jurgen) Jacobs Gelderloos and his wife Hiltje. This farm and the succession of my United States Gelderloos family is documented in the “Housing” chapter.

THE GEOGRAPHIC MIGRATION

The first family that began using the Gelderloos family name lived in Woltersum, Slochteren, Groningen, Netherlands. This village is located in the Province of Groningen in the Northern part of the Netherlands, about 20 miles from the North Sea. Cornelis Hendriks, (b.1683) and Welmoet Roelofs, my 5th great grandparents, were both from Woltersum. They married in 1714 and continued to live there. Their son, Hendrik Cornelis (b.1718) met Geertruida Jurjens of Schildwolde, a small village about 4.5 miles from Woltersum. They were married in 1740 and had Kornelis Hendriks (b.1741) in Schildwolde. Kornelis married Jantie Klaassens van der Veen of Harkstede, Groningen, in 1786. Their son, Hendrik (Hendrikus) Cornelis Hendriks, (b.1787), was my Great Great Grandfather. Hendrik married Grietje Jaspers Noordhof in 1814. Their son Jurjen (Jurgen) Jacobs Gelderloos, my Great Grandfather, was born in 1828 in Appingedam, Groningen, Netherlands. All of these towns are within about 15 miles of each other. Jurgen married Hiltje Buikema in 1860, and eleven years after they were married, the family immigrated to the USA, a mere 4,000 miles west of where they had been living. The family departed from the Province of Groningen in 1872. They sailed on the S.S. Manhattan and arrived in New York on 17 May 1872. The ship was a 2 masted, 1 funnel vessel with a sailing speed of 10 knots. She was 335 feet long and only 42 feet wide. The official record of the ship lists Jurgen and his family originating from Germany and the official Port of Departure for the trip is recorded as Liverpool, England and Queenstown, Ireland. Most likely, the ship picked up passengers in the Netherlands and then stopped at the other ports to maximize the passenger count.

Regarding the United States Gelderloos families, there were four major immigrant couples who began the vast majority of the Gelderloos family members in the United States.

The first immigrant family was Jurgen Jacobs Gelderloos (b.1828) and Hiltje Buikema (b.1833) my great grandparents and their five+ children (Hiltje was pregnant for Hilbert during their immigration). They sailed on the S. S. Manhattan and arrived in New York, New York on 14 May 1872. He and his family settled in the Holland, Michigan area. Until the 1990's most of their descendants lived in the Grand Rapids, Michigan area.

The second Gelderloos family to immigrate was Hinderikus (Cornelis) Gelderloos (b.1851) and his wife Cornelia Dijkema (b.1859). They sailed on the W. A. Scholten from Rotterdam, Netherlands, arriving on 10 March 1880. He and his family settled in the Muskegon, Michigan area, where many of his descendants still reside. Hinderikus was a nephew of Jurgen.

The third immigrant family to arrive in the United States was Hendrikus Klaas Gelderloos (b.1849), his second wife Johanna DeBoer (b.1859) and Klaas (Hendrikus) (Nicholas) Gelderloos (b.1878), a son from Hendrikus's first wife Geertje Jans van der Leeuw (1852-1880). Their two month old daughter Johanna (14 March 1884- 14 May 1884) died on the transport ship, the S. S. Wet Scholten. Hendrikus Klaas was a first cousin to Hinderikus (Cornelis), and also a nephew of Jurgen, and he also settled in the Muskegon, Michigan area.

The fourth immigrant family was Heiko Gelderloos (b.1879) and his wife Caterina (Catherina) Klompjen (b.1875) and their three+ children (Caterina was also pregnant during their immigration). They sailed on the S. S. Noordam from Rotterdam, arriving in New York, New York on 5 May 1906. On their immigration papers they listed H. Evenhuis of Chicago as their U.S. contact person. Upon their arrival, they also declared to have $58 as a family. They settled in the south Chicago, Illinois area. The relationship of Heiko to Jurgen is distant. Jurgen was a descendant of his great grandfather, Hendrik Cornelis' (b.1718) first wife Geertruida Jurgens (b.1708). Heiko was a son of Hendrik's second wife, Aafke (Aefke) Jans (b.1727). That makes their official relationship description to read, "Heiko is the 2nd great grandson of the great grandfather of Jurgen". As distant relatives, they maintained family contact by having cousin "get-togethers" once in a while.

An outline of the descendants for each of these four families is listed later in the book.

The remaining United States Gelderloos families are descendants of three other immigrants. Hendrik Jan Gelderloos (b.1916) left the Netherlands some time after 1943, but before 1950. He and his wife Elisabeth van Kampen (b. 1917) lived in Johannesburg, South Africa where a son Hendrik Jan Christiaan Gelderloos (b.1950) was born. It is unknown when they moved to the U.S., but Hendrik Jan (Sr.) died in Florida, USA in 1984. His son, wife, and daughter also live in Florida.

Pouwel Gelderloos (b.1949) and his wife Mirjam Schreuder immigrated to the United States in about 1981 with two children. They had a total of three boys and five girls. They settled in the State of Montana.

Jacco Jurrien Gelderloos (b.1974) immigrated to the United States and is currently living with his wife Stephanie Ann Irvin (b.1971) and their two daughters in the Detroit, Michigan area. According to my research as of 1 January 2010, this represents the origins of the United States Gelderloos families.

OCCUPATIONS

The oldest reference in the genealogical records that I have been able to access, as well as those that have been accumulated by Henk Gelderloos, references Hendrik Cornelis (Gelderloos) (b.1 May 1718) as a laborer. His son, Kornelis Hendriks (Gelderloos) (b.10 December 1741) was a farmer. His son, Hendrik (Hendrikus) Cornelis Hendriks (Gelderloos), (b.28 January 1787), was known to be mill maker. This reference relates to his skills of building windmills in the Netherlands. The children of Hendrik Cornelis and Grietje are listed as tradespersons: Jurjen, a blacksmith; Cornelis, a painter, and Johannes, a carpenter. Of course, the occupation of farming was prevalent by sheer numbers, due to the agrarian nature of society in the Netherlands during those years

My Great Grandfather, Jurjen (Jurgen) Jacobs Gelderloos (son of Cornelis Hendriks (b.11 May 1828) is listed in the civil registry of 't Zand, Netherlands, as an iron worker, specifically a crude iron worker. It could be speculated that this means a blacksmith as we know that occupation today. But it could also mean that he formed the metal parts necessary in the construction of the windmills, assuming that he worked with his father in the windmill business. Jurjen also served in the Netherlands military starting in 1847

As society became more complex and diverse, the need for more education and training became a driving force, and the occupations of Gelderloos family members, especially in the United States, became more diversified. From nuclear physics to transcendental meditation, from waste management to full-time military service, the extended Gelderloos family of the 20th and 21st century covers a diverse spectrum of occupations.

HOUSING

The oldest reference to housing of my ancestors is a farm site located in Schildwolde, Slochteren, Groningen, Netherlands. The farm was owned and operated by Cornelis Hendriks, my Great Great Great Grandfather and his first wife Grietje Jacobs. It is not known whether that farm had been in the family during the previous generations.

From notes in the civil registry of 't Zand, Netherlands, Jurgen Gelderloos, my Great Grandfather and the Grandson of Cornelis Hendriks (above), was unhappy with the religious conditions of those times where he lived. In order to achieve more religious freedom and improve their "conditions", they immigrated to the United States. Before 1847 Dutch law forbade citizens to leave the official church of the Government to form a "new" church. During this time (1838) Rev. Van Raalte, of Ommen, Netherlands worked with a group of seceders who broke away from the Official Church of the Netherlands to start a new congregation, called the Old Reformed Church. Many of these early parishioners were persecuted by both the Government and the official church; some punishments even involved jail time. Rev. Van Raalte immigrated to the United States in 1846, and settled in the Holland, Michigan area. This marked the beginning of a mass exodus of Dutch citizens to the United States. Western Michigan became a focal point for many of these immigrants. Jurgen and his family were a part of that exodus.

MARRIAGES

In the direct line of descendants of the oldest “blood-line” Gelderloos for whom I have a record (Derk Cornelis), I have 11 generations of families. There is not a recorded birth date for a couple of the generations of males, but for the 6 generations for which I do have data, the average life span for the males was 64.3 yrs, with 52 yrs being the shortest and 77 being the longest. The spouses of these direct line males had an average life span of 56.8 yrs, with the shortest life span of 38 yrs and the longest at 88 yrs.

The oldest marriage record that we have dates back to 14 January 1655 in Woltersum, Slochteren, Groningen, Netherlands. This marriage between Derk Cornelis, my 7th great grandfather, and Hendertjn Hendertjn Hendrijcks is recorded in the Churchbook of Woltersum. Henk Gelderloos recently discovered this recording.

The next oldest marriage for which we have paper documentation was between Jacob Jan Groenevelt (b.1796) and Trientje Kornelis Gelderloos (b.1788), who married on 18 September 1813. This document also contains the oldest record we have of someone signing the name Gelderloos. Both Trientje and Jacob could write, but as is evidenced by Trientje’s signatures, it was not a common thing for them. Just a couple of years before this date Napoleon had mandated surnames for all Dutch residents, so they were not used to using the last name. She is even uncertain how her first name needed to be written by spelling it two different ways – Trientje and Tritjntje. She also forgot one of the “o” in Gelderloos. But at least they could make their “mark” on this official document.

This document is translated as follows:

“In the year 1814, on Thursday the 28th day of the month of April, at 8 o’clock in the evening, is before me, Rudolph Pabus Cleveringa, an official of the Registrar's Office in the community of Appingedam, in the district of Appingedam, in the Department of Wester Eems, appearing:

Hendrik Cornelis Gelderloos, born on 28 January 1787 in Schildwolde, according to a baptismal certificate copy, here present, by occupation a mill builder, legal age son of Cornelis Hendriks Gelderloos, deceased in Schildwolde, and his lawful wife Jantje Klaassens, Living in Schildwolde, and giving her permission to the upcoming marriage.

Grietje Jaspers Noordhof, born on 15 February 1789 in Marsum in the district of Appingedam. She is the legal age daughter of Jasper Simons Noordhof, presently residing at Marsum, here present and giving his consent to the marriage. His lawful wife Grietje Jans Noordhof, died at Marsum, according to records, on 14 June 1813.

The above mentioned persons have requested of me to proceed with the marriage of the couple as planned. The application for a marriage certificate has been made and the necessary notices have been posted. The notices have been placed on the courthouse wall from 11 o'clock in the morning on the 10th day of April 1814 until 11 o'clock in the morning on Sunday, April 17, 1814, in the community of Slochteren. No known opposition was raised. Accordingly, a certificate has been issued through the sheriff of the aforementioned district.

In as much as no opposition was made known to me, Rudolph Pabus Cleveringa, I have the satisfaction to perform the marriage. I read to them out of a lawbook entitled, "About Marriage", and then I asked them whether they would take one another as man and wife. They answered convincingly in the affirmative. In the name of the law I have pronounced them man and wife.

Hendrik Cornelis Gelderloos and Grietje Jaspers Noordhof are united in marriage.

The following are witnesses to this ceremony:

Jacob Jans Groeneveld, 27 years old, by occupation a carpenter, residing in Slochteren. He is the brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Jurrien Sikkens Koster, 31 years old, by occupation a blacksmith, residing in Ladorp. He is no relation to the bridegroom.

Jasper Simons Noordhof, 54 years old, by occupation a farmer, residing at Marsum. He is the father of the bride.

Jacob Hendriks Wed, 37 years old, by occupation a farmer, residing at Holwierde. He is a brother-in-law of the bride.

After reading this in my presence they have signed their signatures below:

H.C. Gelderloos G.J. Noordhof Jacob J. Groeneveld Jurjen Sikkens
Koster J.S. Noordhof J.H. Wed R.P. Cleveringa”

SHOPPING

The world of commerce changed dramatically during the days of post immigration for the Gelderloos families. In 1872, when Jurgen and his family arrived in Holland, Michigan, much of the United States was quite undeveloped. Only in major business centers did the commercial world have much development. The rural areas, like Western Michigan, were still rather primitive by today's standards. 1871 was the year of the beginning of the construction of the Brooklyn Bridge, the first bridge to cross the river into New York City. 1871 also heralded four massive fires, all on the shores of Lake Michigan: the Great Chicago Fire, the Peshtigo, Wisconsin fire, the Manistee, Michigan fire, and the Holland, Michigan fire. On 8 October 1871, Holland Michigan experienced a devastating fire that lasted two days. Most of the downtown area was destroyed in that fire. I do not know the actual date Jurgen and his family arrived in the Holland area, but it must certainly have been traumatic. We know for a fact that on 12 August 1872, he purchased land in Fillmore Township, Allegan County, Michigan; whether they visited downtown Holland to experience the devastation of the fire is unknown.

Another major event was the equine influenza that plagued the entire nation. This outbreak destroyed large numbers of horses and brought the commercial world to its knees. Most deliveries of products and equipment halted, as did the horse-drawn street car transportation business. Even the United States Cavalry was reduced to fighting the hostile Indian tribes in the western U.S. on foot, losing most of their horses to the epidemic. I do not know how this might have impacted our newly immigrated Gelderloos family, but I suspect getting horses to work the farm was a bit more costly than normal. Perhaps this is also the origin of my Father's deeply seated affection for horses. Because they were so valuable to early life on the farm, and they were susceptible to such calamities, farmers placed considerable pride in their animals. Dad always enjoyed seeing horses out in a field or being used by farmers to conduct farm activities.

The United States at this time was also experiencing a significant financial crisis. In 1873 Congress changed the monetary basis of our currency from a silver / gold base to a gold standard. The use of silver for coinage dropped dramatically, and the banking industry, albeit in its early development, staggered. Long term loans were nearly impossible to get, making it very difficult for farmers to purchase land and supplies. The Government also stopped minting silver dollar currency at this time, further deflating the value of silver. I suspect Jurgen had difficulty buying land on credit at this time and probably had to “up-front” a significant amount of cash for his transactions. Supplies for the farm were usually purchased at a feedmill of some kind, and most food commodities were grown on the farm, especially in the family garden. Surplus farm and garden products were then traded for other needed items. Food storage usually consisted of a “root cellar” either dug under the side of the house, or at a location near the house. Eating only those things that were in season was the norm and ordering “take-out” at a restaurant had not yet been invented. Having a 40 acre farm was thought to be about the maximum acreage that one man and his family could work with animals and be self-sustaining. Jurgen’s son, Hilbert and his wife Minnie had just that size farm both in Ravenna and later in Allendale. Hilbert and Minnie also had very limited purchasing opportunities. They grew their basic food supplies on the farm and had very limited contact with the outside world of commerce. Montgomery Wards had started their catalog business in 1872, but it wasn’t until 1883 that they published their first “Wish Book”; the highly sought after book for the outdoor toilets that most homes “enjoyed”. Selecting your clothes and kitchen supplies and then having them delivered to your farm was a totally new experience. Sears Roebuck & Co. also entered the commercial environment about this time. I remember Dad talking about how much they enjoyed “studying” the catalog not only to select what goods they might need, but also to see pictures of another life style. The catalog served a host of purposes for most farm families, not the least of which was as superior product for use in the outhouses, as opposed to whatever other farm or garden supplies had been used previously.

When our immigrant families needed any non-farm goods, the typical sources were either the local feed mill supply or a general store that was usually located in a nearby village. And just running to the store whenever you needed something was out-of-the-question. This kind of a trip involved hitching a team to a cart or wagon, heading to the village at a weather-permitted speed (winter ruts and spring mud), making your purchases, and then returning home to do the necessary horse and buggy chores of putting everything back into the barn. So, it was common for families to go to the store no more often than once a week, and often this was on Saturdays. This time spent in “town” also provided a significant social function. Neighbors could get updated on the “happenings” of the area and could seek help or advice as needed. The village grocery / general stores often only had the most frequently needed items available but would take your request for a particular item and hopefully they would have it for your next visit to town. Grocery stores of this era typically had only dry goods, canned items, or other non-perishable staples. One’s desire for meat products, beyond what you butchered on your farm, was fulfilled at the local butcher shop or by trading items with your neighbors. Produce, again beyond what you grew on your farm, was purchased at a separate produce vendor. Many times all three of these vendors were located next to each other, with an inside doorway connecting them. The development of a small rural shopping district with a general store, a drug store, and perhaps a blacksmith shop, is what my father experienced as a youngster.

Shopping at these stores was a totally different experience in those early days of the grocery industry compared to the self-service environment of today. When going into the store, one would usually have a prepared list of desired items. By either handing the list to one of the clerks, or by verbally requesting the items, the clerk would proceed to their stocked items, select the quantity you desired, and place them onto a counter. Merchandise was stocked from floor to ceiling, necessitating a mechanical pinching tool to reach the higher items. Some stores had a ladder system with a rail that ran across the ceiling or wall. The clerk would slide the ladder to the location of your item(s), climb the ladder to get your goods, and place the items on a counter. Sometimes the store would have a box or bag into which you could place your selections, but often you just took them home in your own basket / container. Credit cards were not yet invented, and the use of checking accounts was limited for many families. If you had a good reputation and a buying history with a store, it was common for the store to allow you to “put it on the books”. Then at the end of the month or at whatever date the store designated, you would pay your bill and “settle-up. If the family had circumstances that prevented them from paying off the whole balance, the storekeeper would carry the balance forward to the next month. More than one business got into serious financial difficulty by not staying current on their collections.

Independent Grocers Association (IGA), The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. (A&P), and Kroger were common names for the stores that evolved during the growth of the neighborhood shopping districts. The advent of self-service also developed during this period. Being able to walk the grocery isles and select whatever products you wished had a major impact on one’s shopping patterns. Also, going to the store only once a week fell into disfavor; running to the store for a loaf of bread was often a treat for me as a child. I would select the item that Mom had requested and then ask the grocer to “put it on the tab”. Later, Mom would stop by the store and pay the weekly / monthly bill.

It was during my early childhood that grocery stores transitioned to supermarkets. Some of the local corner grocery stores became units of larger chain store operations and with that transition, many of the personalized services that people had come to enjoy were scuttled. Putting price before service was the wave of the future, and large discount grocery stores became the stores of choice. In Western Michigan, Mr. Fred Meijer, also a Dutch immigrant, led the grocery race. He took his small grocery stores and either closed them or incorporated them into large supermarkets. At one time in the 1980’s, one could buy groceries, clothes, lumber, and hardware supplies all under one roof....almost like the main street vendors of an earlier era.

Purchasing goods with the use of a credit card began primarily in the early 1950’s. Oil companies each had their own credit card systems, with Standard Oil being the most popular. Soon to follow that trend were banks that saw the opportunity to cash in on the “new way of buying”. MasterCard, VISA, American Express, and later Discover cards became the new cash of the future. A “buy now – pay later” mentality started sweeping the country, often causing families to overspend beyond their ability to repay within the monthly timeframe. This credit system became so pervasive that subsequent generations were raised to accept that never paying off one’s house or car was a perfectly acceptable concept. This wild, fancy-free spending practice, coupled with banks that not only accepted this practice, but also promoted it by encouraging people to “over buy” in regards to their housing and personal pleasure expenditures, greatly contributed to the worldwide financial meltdown that was experienced in the early 2000’s.

TRANSPORTATION

The Gelderloos family has its roots firmly planted in the Netherlands, with the province of Groningen as its cornerstone. Woltersum is “officially” our city of origin; it is uncomplicated to get a perspective of what kinds of transportation our early ancestors used. The Dutch have been draining the seas to make habitable property for centuries. This expertise enabled miles of canals and rivers to be built. These waterways became a principle means of transportation. In the winter they became massive ice skating “streets”, and in the summertime, they facilitated boat and barge traffic. In earlier days, this involved the boats being pulled by horses walking along the sides of the canals. Woltersum was also located near a transportation canal, so it is safe to speculate that Gelderloos family members walked, skated, and boated to wherever their destination might have been. The use of bicycles was also widely promoted as an effective means of transportation. With such a small geographic footprint and such a high concentration of population, the Dutch became experts at traffic management. Even today, there are bikeways dedicated exclusively for non-vehicle use.

In the United States, on the other hand, where land was abundant, no such emphasis on efficiency seemed to develop. The overriding theme of “Go West, Young Man” drove this society to spread out. Little concern was given to the viability of getting goods to a marketplace and the establishment of roads and railroads seemed to be an after-thought. The cities along the Lakeshore of Michigan were exceptions. Rivers draining into Lake Michigan formed hubs of commercial development. Cities like Lansing, Grand Rapids, Holland, and Muskegon served as Meccas for early societal development. The prehistoric river beds that spread out significantly from the current waterways also provided excellent farm land soils.

(In my own Family Book, I used these pages to chronicle the role of transportation, as it related to our family. I took a number of old family pictures that we had of our cars of “yesteryear”, and also listed all the cars that were owned by my father and myself. These will become “precious” to future generations; I encourage you to prepare a similar “Chapter” for your family.)

EDUCATION

The role of education and its impact on society has also played a significant part of the Gelderloos family. In the Netherlands, children were not required to attend school until the laws were changed in 1901. Most of the children worked on their family's farm. "Child labor" was considered normal for the majority of the population. Schools did exist, but they were mostly for the upper-class citizens. We have no records of any Gelderloos family attending these schools. Although we don't have any records to validate this situation, it can be assumed that because so many of the men were trained in a trade, they received some kind of "education". Certainly someone working in the woodworking field needed mathematical skills. Often this type of training took the form of a Master/Apprentice relationship. After WWII the Dutch society changed very dramatically. Children were not only attending High School, but many of them were also going to the Universities. As the educational levels increased, the diversity of occupations also expanded.

Most research today shows a direct positive correlation of education to higher earnings. Our families have been blessed with a lifestyle that certainly exceeds what our ancestors experienced, but an argument can also be made that we have become much more disconnected with that lifestyle. We no longer have the homogeneous neighborhood closeness that existed for previous generations. And, because our careers took us in a variety of directions, the close family relationships have also been lost. Fortunately, the use of the Internet has allowed us to stay "connected".

DEATHS

Of all the male Gelderloos persons in our tree (223), 119 are still living in 2009. Of the 104 persons who have died, I have no recorded death dates for 8 of them. Seventeen of these persons died before the age of 24 months. Of the 79 persons who I know lived longer than 24 months, the average age at death was 61.7 years. The female Gelderlooses are more challenging to track; it is difficult to track their married names after they marry. Of all the Gelderloos females in our tree (224), 117 are presumed living in 2009. These are women who at birth were Gelderlooses and may or may not have married since that recorded birth date. There are 19 women who can be presumed dead, given their birthdates, but for which I have no recorded death date. I have recorded birthdates for the remaining 88 females. Eleven of them died before the age of 24 months. Of the 77 females who lived longer than 24 months, the average age at death was 59.5. This is 2 years younger than the males of the family. However, 7 girls died before the age of 10, but after age 24 mos. So, if those 7 girls are omitted from the calculations, the average age of death for those women who lived beyond age 10 years jumps to 65.0. Using that same age formula for the males of the family, the average age at death for those men who live beyond age 10 years was 64.6.

LIFE IN THE U.S.A. IN 1872

The year that Jurgen immigrated to the United States with his family makes these current events seem like ancient history, and not just a 135+ years ago.

- The 1870 US population was 39,818,449 whereas on 12/7/09 at 9:00 p.m. it was estimated by the U S Census Bureau to be 308,105,398. (The Census Bureau's web site calculates the addition of one person every 15 seconds).
- In 1870, 49% of the labor force was employed in Agriculture; today that number is less than 2%.
- Yellowstone National Park, the first US national park, was established.
- Ulysses S. Grant was re-elected President of the United States.
- A severe break out of Yellow Fever, Cholera, and Smallpox sweeps the Southern states of the US.
- Colorado is admitted as the 38th state to the Union (1876). Michigan was admitted just 34 years earlier (1837).
- General Custer makes his last stand at the Battle of Little Big Horn in Montana (Custer's Last Stand – 1876).
- The first American zoo was opened in Philadelphia (1874).
- The Jesse James gang robs a bank in Columbia, Kentucky – (1 dead - $1500).
- Susan B Anthony is fined for trying to vote – (2 occasions).

As for inventions and developments, the 1870's were again "life-changing".

- Thomas Edison invented the phonograph (1877).
- Thomas Edison also invented the electric light (1878).
- The first electric street lighting anywhere occurs in Cleveland, OH (1878).
- The first "Flat-Bottomed" paper bag was invented.

- Thomas J. Martin patents the fire extinguisher.
- Barbed wire was introduced.
- The first all-metal, high wheeled bicycle was introduced.
- Corrugated cardboard was invented by Albert Jones.
- James Gamble invented Ivory Soap and Levi Strauss introduced Jeans.
- The Idaho Potato was invented by Luther Burbank, a plant breeder.
- Petroleum Jelly (Vaseline) was introduced by Robert Chesebrough.
- George B. Brayton patents a gasoline powered engine.

Wages and Prices were also shocking, by today's standards.

- Carpenters earned $2.64 a day.
- Locomotive Engineers - $2.47 a day.
- Blacksmiths - $2.68 a day.
- Cotton Goods Industry (male) $1.51 – (female) $.89 a day.
- Butter was $.15 /pound.
- Sugar - $.07 / pound.
- Oranges - $.50 / dozen, when you could get them.
- Flour - $.04 / pound.
- Coffee - $.12 / pound.
- An average work horse cost about $150.
- A buggy cost $75.
- A wagon cost $65.
- A 32' x 40' house (4 rooms) cost $700; a 16' x 22' (2 rooms) house was $300...chairs were $1.25, and a complete bedroom suite was $15.
- Cook stoves cost $25.
- A one year supply of coal was approx. $80.
- Land costs were about $5/acre.

Prices from Montgomery Ward's First Catalog (1872)

- Two white undershirts - $1.00 (colored - $1.25)
- Two white drawers - $1.00 (colored - $1.25)
- Six pairs of men's socks - $1.00
- Seven yards of blue denim - $1.00
- One hoop skirt, one bustle, and one hair braid - $1.00
- One ladies gold locket - $1.50
- One heavy plaid shawl - $3.00

The typical schoolhouse was a one-room classroom with multiple grade levels, all taught by one teacher. The schoolhouse was typically furnished with desks, benches, a potbelly stove, and a chalkboard. The students used readers, primers, slates, chalk, copybooks, pencils, and workbooks. Reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, and history were the primary subjects. Graduation usually only occurred after successful completion of an extensive oral exam.*

JURGEN JACOBS GELDERLOOS

I am elaborating on my great grandfather for a couple of reasons. First of all, he is the one who initiated the immigration process that set in place the United States Gelderloos family. There is also a degree of awe that surrounds immigrant families and all the hardships they had to endure. These hardships seem overwhelming in retrospect. I'm not sure how many of his descendants would undertake such a voyage.

Jurgen Jacobs Gelderloos was born on 11 May 1828 in Appingedam, in the house numbered 80 of the first neighborhood. Why his middle name was Jacob instead of Hendriks, like all of the other children of the family, is unknown. Jurgen's father was a windmill maker, and his brothers were also craftsmen like himself.

The date of their departure from the Netherlands is not known, but their arrival date into New York City, New York was 14 May 1872. It was common for a sailing ship to take 4-6 weeks to cross the Atlantic Ocean. Records in Groningen reveal that Jurgen and his family departed from the Netherlands, and the ship apparently stopped and officially departed from Liverpool, England. The S. S. Manhattan Manifest lists Jurgen, as 43 years of age, and Hermana Buikema as age 38. It is unknown why she is listed as Hermana, not Hiltje. Their five children are also listed with their ages, and they are recorded as being from Germany. Perhaps this was more expedient for the record maker, in that he could use ditto marks. They all traveled in the steerage compartment. This was the most common classification for immigrant travelers, and it was not a pleasant trip for most of them. The steerage compartment was located in the bottom of the ship with hundreds of immigrants crowded into a small space. The passengers were assigned a bunk area with little or no privacy. Families were expected to share a common space. There were few toilets available for the crowded conditions and lighting and air circulation was limited to the few portholes in the ship and the steep stairways to the upper decks.

It is no wonder, given those travel conditions, that many of the immigrants arrived in the U.S. both sick and frightened. After such a traumatic experience, they needed to successfully clear the Immigration Department. This involved passing a physical examination and a mental examination. They also had to prove that they would not become wards of the state by having a certain amount of cash on hand... (Usually around $50). When our family passed all these examinations, they purchased train tickets for their trip to Michigan.

It is important to realize that Hiltje was pregnant during this passage and that just 4 months after they arrived in New York, she delivered Hilbert in Holland, Michigan and died as a result of that childbirth.

This copy of the ship's Manifest was cut and pasted from three different pages. The first part shows the heading of the ship's Manifest. The middle part is the listing of Jurgen and part of his family. The final section is the continuation of the Manifest page where son Rembertus is listed.

District of New York—Port of New York.

I, James B. Price Master of the S.S. "Haukattau" do solemnly, sincerely and truly that the following List or Manifest, subscribed by me, and now delivered by me to the Collector of the Customs of the Collection District of New York, is a full and perfect list of all the passengers taken on board of the said S.S. "Haukattau" at Louisport from which port said S.S. "Haukattau" has now arrived; and that on said list is truly designated the age, the sex, and the occupation of each of said passengers, the part of the vessel occupied by each during the passage, the country to which each belongs, and also the country of which it is intended by each to become an inhabitant; and that said List or Manifest truly sets forth the number of said passengers who have died on said voyage, and the names and ages of those who died.

So help me God.
